Marsh-Billings-Rockefeller National Historical Park

We invite you to explore the future of the Mount Tom Forest

The Mount Tom Forest is one of the earliest examples of planned and continuously managed reforestation in the United States. The Forest illustrates more than a century of stewardship, from the earliest scientific forestry techniques borrowed from nineteenth-century Europe to contemporary sustainable management practices. A draft forest management plan/environmental assessment has been developed to preserve the evocative historic character of the Forest and to continue the tradition of careful, sustainable forest management practiced by the Billings and Rockefeller families. The draft Plan/Environmental Assessment is available for review at: www.nps.gov/mabi/pphtml/documents.html
